FI will indicate if the default can be remedied without damages having been suffered within a reasonable period following the claim. If this is not possible the default will commence upon the date of the claim, otherwise at the time the period indicated by FI passes if the shortcoming has not been remedied in full at that time. The claim from FI will be construed as an official notice in default.

17.4 In the event FI instructs the Supplier to provide goods or services in accordance with designs or specifications supplied by FI, then FI will be considered the owner of all Intellectual Property rights embodied in the supplied goods or services. To the extent that it may be necessary the Supplier will assign any such rights that may accrue to the Supplier on the basis of statutory provisions to FI.
